Why offer local gift boxes?

Especially during the holidays, customers shift their attention from shopping for themselves to giving gifts to colleagues, friends, and family. For many, one of the tough decisions is choosing what to give friends and family. Gift box services involve collecting local items, wrapping them in an attractive format, and delivering them to the recipient. They end up being a delightful gift-giving experience that goes beyond the usual gifts on any given day.

After two years of curbing or altering celebrations due to a virus, people are seeking more experiential gifts for loved ones. Thankfully, carefully-curated gift boxes are available to meet the needs of a variety of recipients. Surprisingly, there was no shortage of available gift box options. Between clothing, chocolates, cheese, crafts, and spa gifts, narrowing down the selection may be the way to find something that excites you.

Connecting with customers

For many customers, face-to-face contact trumps social media. Even the Harvard Business Review shares how much people appreciate the value of real-life interactions. Whether you can meet your guests in person or not, use email and social media marketing tools to keep people informed of your latest offers.

One way to let customers know about new offerings is to automate your mailing list and send out monthly or quarterly surveys. By tailoring your messaging and marketing to your audience, you'll continue to learn what works to capture attention. Assume they don't know your business and look at all your touchpoints to connect with your customers.
