Ramco Industries, a pioneer in the field of manufacturing of fine quality building and construction materials. They innovate new technology by integrating various technologies and manufacturing materials for adopting new technologies. They develop the system of green dry construction which enable the construction of building at lesser water content. The other products like fire rated partition, calcium silicate boards and many more for building.

Construction techniques have been changed a lot when compared to the techniques followed in the last decades. The new techniques and technologies have proven many impossible construction methods possible in today's generations. Here is yet another cool technology in the construction of a building called Green Dry Construction. This method uses a very low amount of water which saves energy consumption and the best method for an area having water scarcity. This method is easy to construct especially in the metropolitan cities where there is a demand for water.
